

Information on Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL)

Introduction

Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL) acknowledges the skills and knowledge gained from work and experience, or from courses or study undertaken but for which formal qualifications were not awarded. It may take many forms; attending skills or management courses, creating material for broadcast, winning awards for excellence, and/or experiences in the media industry.

Candidates for RPL go through an assessment process by providing evidence to the New Zealand Broadcasting School of their experience, supported by attestation from relevant industry personnel. It may also require an interview, testing (written, practical or oral) and demonstration of competence to verify claims and standards of proficiency. Candidates may be asked to demonstrate evidence of competence to embark on a tertiary programme requiring generic literacy and writing skills.

The guiding principle is that a candidate must have achieved a level of competency in his or her field to a minimum standard, assessed according to current industry practices.

If the skills and knowledge of the candidate are equivalent to that expected from on-campus students successfully completing the full time course/s for which recognition is sought, and this can be clearly proven, then the application is likely to succeed.

RPL vs Cross Crediting (CC)

Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL) differs from cross crediting. RPL applies to informal learning which has not been assessed. Cross crediting is based on verified results from another recognised educational provider, where the overlap in course outcomes is VERY close to the Ara | Te Pūkenga equivalent.

Fees

The charge for assessing an NZBS RPL application is $1,050 (including GST). If a challenge test is required, an extra fee may be requested. No formal assessment of RPL will be undertaken by the school without the full payment of the RPL fee in advance (refer to the Payment Form for payment options).

Attestation

Evidence supplied must be confirmed by at least two relevant industry personnel nominated by the candidate. These must be senior, knowledgeable, trustworthy and authoritative persons who have been in a position to assess the candidate's relevant and current skills, knowledge and experience for a reasonable period of time. Each should complete one of the appropriate forms included within this document and return it directly to the New Zealand Broadcasting School with contact details.

Applicants for RPL will be assessed in one of these three 'craft' areas.

1 Radio Broadcasting

Candidates for radio should be able to demonstrate generic work skills appropriate to participating as a member of a team of professional radio broadcasters, in a number of the following areas:

- speech and voice production
- programming
- sales and/or promotions
- creative writing for radio
- technical production
- commercial programme production
- non-commercial programming and production
- marketing and audience research
- digital and social media content creation or management

In addition, candidates must be able to provide evidence of an appropriate level of experience of the professional practice of radio broadcasting.

2 Broadcast Journalism

Candidates for broadcast journalism should be able to demonstrate generic work skills appropriate to participating as a member of a team of professional broadcasters in either radio or television.

They should be able to provide evidence of an appropriate level of understanding of the professional practice of broadcast journalism embracing the following generic work skills:

- news gathering and recognition
- news writing skills
- voice performance
- media law/ethnics
- news compilation and presentation
- specialist reporting

- editing and post production
- vision mixing
- production management
- writing for pictures
- directing
- programme research
- digital and social media content creation or management

In addition, candidates must be able to provide evidence of an appropriate level of experience of the professional practice of television broadcasting and video production.

Curriculum Vitae

All applicants for RPL must provide a detailed profile of their experience in the media and related activities, together with a list of current competencies. Information should be provided in the standard format of a curriculum vitae, and prefaced with a covering letter. The curriculum vitae should include details of the candidate's secondary and tertiary education and achievements. The covering letter must indicate clearly which craft area the applicant is seeking RPL for and outline the highlights of the candidate's relevant work experience and education to date. It is required that at least two completed attestation forms are included with the application.

When you are awarded RPL . . .

We will notify you in writing and your results will be entered into your academic record.

If you are NOT awarded RPL . . .

Applicants who do not pass may appeal the decision according to Ara | Te Pūkenga Policies and Procedures which will be made available to the applicant on request.
